PHILADELPHIA IS CENTER OF HISTORIC AREA OF THE STATE

Much of Sacred History Was Unfolded in Quaker City

BEAUTIFUL SCENERY

Section Replete With Attractive Highways and Waterways

Note: This is the sixth of a series of articles which are designed to stimulate interest of Pennsylvanians in their native state, as a vast storehouse of interesting and profitable historic and scenic treasures. Written under the direction of Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of Highways, the series aims to encourage touring within the confines of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, May 11.—Pennsylvanians can well be proud of Philadelphia and its beautiful suburbs, and the Keystone State traveler will find a journey to this area well worthwhile.

For ten days beginning Wednesday night, a huge civic demonstration "Philadelphia on Parade" is being staged in the Quaker City with pageantry and ceremony recounting Philadelphia's march of progress from Colonial Days to the present.

Convention Hall at 34th and Spruce streets will be the center of the affair; and persons prominent in the business, professional, and civic life of the community will participate.

Much of the sacred history of the Nation was unfolded in Philadelphia and precious relics of Colonial Days are preserved within the city.

Tradition truly places Philadelphia in the foremost position of America's great cities. Here is Independence Hall; the Liberty Bell; Carpenter's Hall where the first Continental Congress met; the Betsy Ross House, home of the American flag; the house of William Penn, founder of this great Commonwealth; Christ Church, where George Washington worshipped; and the homes of Robert Morris and other great Revolutionary heroes. These are all open to visitors to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, too, is a center of educational culture with the University of Pennsylvania, Temple University, Jefferson Medical College, and Drexel Institute, drawing students from all parts of the world.

Fairmount Park is another feature of a visit to Philadelphia and the Zoological Gardens and institutions that date from Revolutionary Days where statesmen dwelt as Colonial residents, make this a spot of natural beauty and historic interest.

A maze of highways gives access to Philadelphia, at the same time interlacing the myriad suburban communities and the historic shrines surrounding the city. For those who hesitate about driving amidst the heavy city traffic or locating the streets, there are spacious parking lots at the city borders with swift transit facilities into the heart of the city. Explorers afoot find it pleasant to be relieved of parking problems, and the extra time made available for additional sightseeing.

Part of the Philadelphia visit should be a motor jaunt along Wissahickon Drive, named for the stream which Indians called "Catfish Creek" because of the fish abounding in the waters. Other parkway drives and the objects of interest in Fairmount Park are equally alluring. The busy harbor on the Delaware and the U. S. Navy Yard are fascinating to visitors. Nearby is Valley Forge, sacred to the Nation, where the beautiful Washington Chapel charms and inspires. Washington Crossing Park borders the Delaware River, not far distant. Roosevelt State Park, one of the newer reservations set aside for the recreation and pleasure of the public, is in this vicinity.

At Roosevelt Park, also along the Delaware, one finds a canal, complete with boat and plodding mules on the towpath. The barge may be hired for sightseeing parties and has become so popular that reservations are made well in advance by writing to The Barge Master, New Hope, Pennsylvania.

To the west of Philadelphia, along U. S. Route 1, many places hold historic significance, such as Chadds Ford and Brandywine Creek. The entire southeastern area is dotted with magnificent homes, prosperous farms, noted stables, and famous gardens.

Those who have hastened through the southeast while enroute to seashore or other out-of-state points are sure to find pleasurable surprise and measureless delights in a more leisurely tour of the area. Here are homes older than the Union and industrial marvels as modern as tomorrow.

Nation Joins in Observance of Mothers' Day

In a modest little home in Chelsea, England, an elderly little lady patiently serves as model for her son, a struggling artist who has yet to attain fame. Gradually the portrait takes form. The last brush stroke applied, James Abbott McNeill Whistler has added a masterpiece to the world's art gallery. In such manner was created "Whistler's Mother", one of his greatest paintings, purchased by the French government in 1891 for $750, and valued above any price today. It is symbolic of Mothers' day, founded by Anna Jarvis, which this year falls on May 13.

S. P. C. A. HEARS REPORT ABOUT $900 BEQUEST

Money Will Be Used For The Purchase of A New Ambulance

TALKS TO THE SCHOOLS

LAHASKA, May 11.—With about 25 members in attendance, a meeting of the Bucks County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was held at the Animal Shelter, near here, Wednesday afternoon. John Frey, of Richboro, vice-president, presided.

Miss Agnes Briggs, secretary, in her report stated that the society was left $900 under the will of Ellen A. Fell and that a committee had been appointed to purchase a new ambulance.

Vice-President Frey, chairman of the committee, explained that they had purchased a new Ford half-ton panel delivery truck from J. J. Conray, who as a donation put in a tight steel floor. The interior has been fitted up as an ambulance by Mr. Frey.

Mrs. David N. Fell, Jr., reported that she had received a letter from Mrs. A. W. Lear, treasurer of the Friendship Thimble Social, which donated the sum of $19 to the society to aid it in the good work it is doing in Bucks County.

Miss Edith H. Killey, educational secretary, plans to visit a number of the public schools before the closing of the term and talk to the children on kindness to animals.

There is also a very fine large dog at the "Shelter," with an excellent disposition, awaiting a home. These dogs can be had for a small donation.

At the present time there are four dogs being boarded at the "Shelter." The next meeting will be held in July or August.

POPPY DAY LOCALLY IS TO BE SATURDAY, MAY 25

American Legion Auxiliary of Bracken Post Will Sell Flowers

AID DISABLED "VETS"

Saturday, May 25th, will be Poppy Day in Bristol. On that day the women of Robert W. Bracken Post, American Legion Auxiliary, will distribute little red poppies on the streets to be worn in honor of the World War dead. The observance here will be part of the annual nation-wide observance of Poppy Day, during which millions of Americans will pay tribute to the memory of the war dead by wearing memorial poppies.

Poppy Day activities here will be directed by a committee from the Auxiliary headed by Mrs. Leo Riley, chairman.

The poppies which will be worn here have been made by disabled World War veterans. The poppy making has provided employment for needy veterans through the winter and spring months, enabling them to help support themselves and families.

Public response on Poppy Day will determine how soon and how extensively this work can be re-opened.

In exchange for the poppies, the Auxiliary women will ask each person to contribute a dollar.

"BEHOLD, THY MOTHER"

By ELLEN BRACE BATEMAN

A reprint of an article contributed by Mrs. Fred H. (Ellen Brace) Bateman to the "Visitor," a bi-weekly publication of the First Presbyterian Church, York, Pa., May 7, 1932.

America has so many special days which we, as a nation honor, among which are Independence Day, Armistice Day, Thanksgiving and Labor Day, Memorial Day, Washington's and Lincoln's Birthday, and Arbor Day. These are truly days that belong to America.

Then we love to celebrate Christmas and Easter Day with many other nations of the world, and hope that the time will soon come when these days will be recognized and honored by the whole, wide world.

On Sunday, May 8th (1932), we celebrate Mother's Day as a nation, yet it represents no historical event in our country's history. It originated, however, in America, and affects every single family in our country.

Let us read part of the story of the Mother's Day:

"But there were standing by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

"When Jesus, therefore, saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son.

"Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour the disciple took her unto his own home." John 19:25-27.

"Behold, thy Mother." This message should come to each one of us today. I am so glad that the last loving thought of Jesus for any one on earth was for His mother; that even in an agony that none of us can imagine, He saw His mother standing by Him.

MORRISVILLE CHURCHES TO OBSERVE MOTHER'S DAY

Special Programs Arranged For Services To Be Held Tomorrow

OTHER BOROUGH NEWS

MORRISVILLE, May 11.—Mother's Day will be observed in the churches here tomorrow with special services. In the Methodist Church, Mother's Day will be celebrated with a number of features on the program. At the 11 o'clock service Mrs. H. C. Leonard, of Philadelphia, will give an address. In the evening the young people of the church will have charge of the service.

The Rev. Oliver Newton, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, will preach on "Mother" at the morning service at 11 o'clock.

Mother's Day will be observed in the Sunday School of the Presbyterian Church at the regular session at 10 o'clock with a unique program which has been planned under the direction of the superintendent, Edmund C. McClelland. There will be singing of appropriate verses to old revival tunes and vocal and instrumental selections. There will also be a short sermon by Harold De Windt, of Princeton Theological Seminary, and a distribution of flowers to all mothers. Mr. De Windt will preach at both the morning and evening services in the Presbyterian Church.

A Mother's Day program will be given in the Baptist Sunday School at 10 o'clock. The regular church service will be held in the evening and the pastor, the Rev. Milton B. Davis, will preach.

Plans have been completed for the observance of Poppy Day in Morrisville today, Saturday, May 11, and Mrs. George Kelly, the chairman, has an organization of volunteer workers who will distribute the memorial flowers throughout the borough. The volunteers will serve without pay and every cent collected is used for the welfare of the veterans. Mrs. Kelly has pointed out that the little memorial flower pays tribute to those gallant young men who sacrificed their lives in defense of American ideals on the poppy-studded battle fields of France and Belgium, and it raises funds for the relief and rehabilitation of the living victims of the war, the disabled veterans, and their families and the families of the dead.

The Red Cross, at its regular meeting Monday afternoon, in the Community House, will receive final reports on the recent nurse appeal. Mrs. J. Gordon White, chairman of the committee, expects to reach the $900 goal set at the outset of the campaign. Mrs. E. H. Windle, chairman of the Red Cross, will preside over the meeting. The Red Cross card party, which will be in the form of a dessert tea, will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Windle, Hulmeville Road near Fallsington, next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Howell Windle and Miss Rachel Carver, will be assisting hostesses.

RETURNS FROM FLORIDA

Mrs. Annie R. Rose has returned to her home in Newportville after spending the winter in Winter Park, Florida.

URGENT THAT WORK AT PENNSBURY BE DONE NOW, HE SAYS

Dr. Albert Cook Myers Visits Historic Site and Surveys Work Done

VOICES HIS SURPRISE

Amazed at Effects the Weather Has Had On The Foundations

"If any more work is to be at 'Pennsbury,' it is urgent that it be now."

These were the words of Dr. Albert Cook Myers, secretary of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, when he visited the site of "Pennsbury" this week, in company with Dr. Warren Laird and Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, members of the Pennsylvania Art Commission, when the latter two paid their first visit to the historical spot where Penn resided in 1699-1701.

Dr. Myers voiced surprise when he saw how the weather had affected the foundations of Penn's Manor, which had been excavated several months ago. "The winter weather did more harm than I imagined it would," he added.

Although work has not been carried forward during the winter, due to lack of funds, it is the hope of those interested in the rebuilding of the manor house of William Penn, that an appropriation will be forthcoming from the state very soon.

If and when finances are available to continue the project, one of the first pieces of work to be carried out is the removal of the farmhouse built in 1838, to a spot 400 feet to the rear of its present site, the removal being back from the river. At present the farmhouse rests over a portion of the foundation walls of the manor house, about 450 feet from the Delaware. With removal of the frame dwelling, where the caretaker now resides, more excavating can be gotten underway, and the remainder of the manor house walls unearthed.

The site to which the farm-house is to be removed, has met with approval of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, and the work thus far done has been approved by the State Art Commission. Certain proposals were looked over by Drs. Laird, McKenzie and Myers this week, when they were accompanied on their tour of inspection by Charles Henry Moon, chairman of the Pennsbury Committee, and others interested in the endeavor.

It is necessary that all buildings erected by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania have Dr. Laird's approval as well as that of the state architect.

During the course of the excavations several months ago various articles of value, including trinkets, implements, etc., relics of the time of Penn, were unearthed, and these were carefully recorded and indexed. For a short period some were exhibited in Philadelphia, and now all repose in fire-proof vaults, either at Pennsbury or Morrisville. Records were made of all such material at Harrisburg, and the pieces also include hardware, fragments of leaden casement windows, hearth bricks, glazed tiles from the fire-places.

Thus far two-thirds of the manor house foundations have been located, and the other third rests under the farm-house, it is stated. The foundation walls of the baker or brew house have been uncovered, as well as of the malt house. The latter measures 23 by 41 feet. These two buildings were connected, and all were under one roof. The original group of buildings was located 450 feet from the river. In speaking of the need for more funds, a member of the commission on the tour of inspection this week, stated there is good reason to believe that the walls of the kitchen will be found to the rear of the manor house.

The plan is to reconstruct the buildings of "Pennsbury" as they were in the time of William Penn. The work is under the direction of the commission's experienced archaeologist, Dr. Donald A. Cadzow.

A classified ad will sell that piece of furniture that is no longer needed.

SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1935

MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day has become a national institution. In every part of the country its recurrence on the second Sunday of May is greeted each year with a wider observance.

In hundreds of churches either motherhood will be the sermon theme or there will be some other form of recognition of the anniversary. Furthermore, thousands of men and women unattached to churches but keeping alive in them the one human love which knows no rivalry will honor the day in their own individual ways.

Visiting Mother, or writing to Her, sending Her a present, or wearing a flower in Her memory if She has passed beyond our mortal ken—each heart will speak to Her in its own language. And happy are those who do not have to speak to Her across the veil—who have not lost Her! What words are there that compare with Home and Mother?

IT WAS BOUND TO COME

Nature, ever disrespectful of the AAA, has just dealt Comrade Tugwell and his workers for the Cause another severe blow in the dust storms of the West. The farmers had all been signed up to receive so much per "case" for not growing wheat. Now, it seems, it will be necessary to grow some wheat, after all, and what to do?

The government has already agreed to pay the gentlemen of the wide open spaces so much per acre for not growing wheat. Obviously there was not much incentive for these gentlemen to grow wheat and lose what was rightfully theirs.

Controller General McCarl, heretofore seeing clearly on most of these governmental expenditures, has decided the issue. Let the farmers grow the wheat they had agreed not to grow, he says, and pay them for not growing the wheat they will grow.

McCarl must have been reading the Western paper that suggested some weeks ago that he would make a good candidate for the Republicans to run for president. At least his latest decision has all the identification marks of a candidacy, with the farm vote in view.

There are just two plans. Either the people use the government or the government uses the people.

A factory boiler and brick chimney have disappeared in Virginia. If the boys steal a set of incorporation papers, production can commence.

The nation has plenty of trouble seeing things clearly, what with dust storms and mud-slurping.

An increase in industrial employment brings complaints from the rich that it is hard to find servants. We fear there is no help for them.

Dr. Townsend suggests a fund of only $100,000,000 to promote political thinking. We'll have the good physician thinking in dimes yet.

New York schoolgirls have been ordered to wear black stockings. In the great city of New York there must be stores still carrying this line.

It was a bad month for magicians: Houdini's brother was nearly suffocated in an escape stunt, and six Philadelphia lawyers were disbarred.

"BEHOLD, THY MOTHER"

and provided for her comfort and care for the rest of her earthly pilgrimage. I am glad Mary was at her place of duty, "standing by" at the foot of the cross of her beloved son (the only thing left that she could do) and could know that His last earthly thought and care were for her. Better than any words of farewell were these loving words for her protection.

"Behold, thy Mother." Do not these words come down through the ages, to each one of us, as a challenge? Behold, see, think, take care of thy mother, consider her charm, her devotion, and her love.

Mary stood by. A good mother always stands by her child, through his sicknesses, in his misfortunes and troubles and sins, in his pleasure, successes and honors. She knows his heartaches, aims and ambitions, but still she stands by. Did yours? Does yours?

Do we, as mothers who are living today, realize our high privilege of "standing by" lovingly, sympathetically, helpfully?

"Behold, thy Mother." If she has passed on, your opportunities for showing your love for her are not over—never, till you die. You can recall her life in yours. If she is still here, then each morning repeat these words: "Behold, thy Mother," and by every word and act of nobleness and honor, you will bring a joy and a peace unto her life which is beyond expression.

Wear a flower for her, keep her picture in your wallet, but better yet, keep the imprint of her life in yours. "Behold, thy Mother."

"THE COLD FINGER CURSE"

by EDWIN DIAL TORGERON

CHAPTER XXXIV

"Let me get this straight now," the manager, using a small screw-driver, dismantled the instrument before him as he talked, noting serial numbers as he encountered them. "You wish to know whether this telephone has been provided lately with a new mouthpiece, and if possible how lately. And you have another instrument—of the same type as this, is it?"

Montigny told him it was the telephone removed from Violet Elderbank's bedroom. "Let me sketch for you a hypothetical case. You are my enemy and I am plotting murder." The manager smiled at him, not very mirthfully. "I wish to incriminate you," continued Montigny. "I desire that your finger-prints shall be found at the scene of the crime. I have access to your home. I know that your telephone receiver, which you touch constantly, must have upon it numerous examples of your finger-records. The mouthpiece particularly, which you have touched many times in adjusting the instrument, must have your finger-prints on it."

"Ugly thought, but interesting," murmured the manager. "Very well. Within a few seconds' time I unscrew the mouthpiece of your telephone and quickly substitute another which I have had in my pocket. At the scene of the crime there is a telephone of similar type—not one of the new French phones."

"It almost was," interrupted the manager. "I recall now that we had a complaint from Mrs. Elderbank when she first moved in—she claimed a French type receiver had been ordered, but we found no record of it. We offered to make the change at once, but she said never mind, she wouldn't bother."

"So? Had it been a French telephone the scheme would not have worked—the mouthpiece, of course, being different."

"But it did work, you think, in this instance?"

"I am hoping you will prove that for me."

"I'll do my best. Now let me have the serial numbers on the Elderbank phone."

"Here they are," said Montigny. "And I shall take along this mouthpiece of Thurber's telephone, if you do not mind. I must protect the finger-prints we found upon it. Photographs have been made, but it is better to preserve the original."

"I'll try to let you hear from me this afternoon, or tomorrow at the latest," promised the manager.

Outside again, Montigny hailed a taxi.

"The Art Mart—a shop on Eighth Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues," he told the driver.

Why he was going there he did not precisely know. He was not impelled by an overpowering desire to see St. Gregory Valcour's watercolor masterpiece, Goldfish Surrounded by Blue. But he smelled a rat, an artistic rat. Montigny was no connoisseur, but he knew enough about art to recognize the impudent gaucheries of Valcour's work. And he was obeying a sixth sense which had long been valuable to him.

The Art Mart, on Eighth Street, was an artists' supply house which dealt, as a set so rushing sideline, in the work of contemporary masters and a few contemporary novices. Montigny looked over the canvases and watercolors offered for sale before inquiring for the manager. In a display window was one that he recognized—Black Day on Bleeker Street. Inside there were three others which bore the bold, self-confident signature, "Valcour," in their lower corners. But there was no sign of a gold-fish, hemmed in by blue or any other color.

The proprietress, whom Montigny presently consulted, was a Russian-esque young lady with slicked-down black hair.

"Valcour?" she said. "Oh, yes. We have some of his most important work." She led the way rapidly to the front of the store where the pictures were exhibited. "We have had quite a few inquiries for his watercolors of late."

"Indeed?" murmured Montigny. "I was interested in one which I believe you had in your window recently, but I do not see it now—Goldfish Surrounded by Blue."

"Ah, yes. We sold that. Only this morning. But the one which we have in the window now—Black Day on Bleeker Street, it is called—I really believe in it."

"But what I wanted was the Goldfish," said Montigny regretfully. "Why didn't I come back, before it was too late? May I ask whom you sold it to?—perhaps I know the party."

The proprietress frowned thoughtfully. "Why, it was a cash sale—I made it in cash—but I don't believe he mentioned his name."

"He took the picture with him—there was no delivery?"

"He came in his car. His Japanese chauffeur waited for the picture while we were wrapping it."

"Could you describe the gentleman?"

The young woman looked at him sharply. "What is this?" she demanded. "Why the inquiry?"

"I am of the police," said Montigny, displaying a badge. "This is an inquiry which in no sense involves you or your business, but I wish if possible to get in touch with the man who bought that picture."

"Oh!" The tone of the proprietress was less tart than startled now. "Why, he was a man of middle age, quite gentlemanly, rather scholarly. I should say; clean-shaven, I believe. No eye-glasses. He wore a gray suit, gray soft hat, gray spats, I believe and black shoes. He had called yesterday—that, I suppose it was he. He said he had seen this picture in the window, and wanted to know whether we still had it. We did not have it, but we sent to the artist's studio and got it. It had been on exhibition here for quite a time, and the artist had taken it back; said he thought he had a sale for it. He had been another inquiry for it yesterday, I believe, but the customer bought something else."

"And you cannot remember anything more distinctive about the gentleman who bought the Goldfish?"

"Why, no, I can't say that I do."

"The chauffeur did not call his name?"

"No. I did not hear it if he did."

"He did not call the chauffeur's name?"

"No. Wait a minute—yes he did. What was it he called him? Something that suggested 'Jiu-jitsu.' He called him—Hitsu. That was the name."

"Hitsu. A scholarly gentleman with gray spats and a chauffeur by the name of Hitsu. That may help. But may I ask you, please, if you hear from him, will you get his name and address?"

"Surely. It isn't a case of—stolen goods, or anything?"

"Nothing like that." Montigny gave her his name and thanked her. He sought out a telephone booth at a corner cigar store and called McEniry again.

"You want a Japanese chauffeur named Hitsu, or a man who employs one by that name?" chuckled McEniry. "That's a swell lead, now, ain't it? Why don't you stick to soap and telephones, Montigny?"

"The employment agencies," said Montigny. "There, possibly, is the only chance."

All right, if you think it's important I'll have him canvassed—by telephone to save time. Where'll I call you if we have any luck?"

"I am going home—to Mrs. Elderbank's home."

Montigny was seated in Mrs. Elderbank's drawing-room, reading the crime news of the latest editions. Forty minutes later, when Cupples brought him a detachable telephone and plugged it in to a convenient connection.

"I think it is police headquarters, sir," said Cupples.

"How nice of you, Cupples. You need not stand outside the door and listen. You will hear nothing."

McEniry reported what might or might not be luck.

"We found five registered by the name of Hitsu," he said. "Two cooks, one butler, two chauffeurs. We checked the license list for the chauffeurs, so we have the home addresses, they gave us as well as the people they work for. Want just the chauffeurs, or all five?"

"Just the chauffeurs for today, thank you."

Five minutes later Montigny was bound uptown in quest of two em-

XI.—Hannah Hough, d. April 18, 1819; m. Simon Meredith.

Before we leave Richard Hough's family I should like to say a word or two about the coat of arms. Richard's descendants in the male lines have been using the coat of arms listed under his name in Crozier's "General Armory." Geo. Norbury MacKenzie's "Colonial Families of America" Vol. II, and in John Matthew's "American Armory and Blue Book." The blazon is as follows: Arms—Argent, a bend Sable; Crest—a wolf's head erased; Sable; motto—"Memor Esto Majorum."

The arms (Argent, a bend Sable) are an ancient Hough device, in use by the family in Cheshire long before the Herald's Visitation in the sixteenth century. Another very ancient Hough coat is that of the Houghs of Hough (or Hogh) in Nantwich Hundred, Cheshire, which consists only of the arms: Argent, a chevron Sable between three crescents of the field. The first coat of arms (the one which the Houghs descended from Richard bear) is the one borne by the Houghs of Leighton and Thornton Hough, Cheshire, since circa 1250; the crest was added sometime after the Visitation of 1580.

We have no proof to date that Richard Hough used this blazon. The late Oliver Hough of Newtown, whose bookplate [See "Hallowell-Paul Family History" 1924] was an engraving of the same coat of arms, found the device "Argent, a bend Sable" in use by a great-grand uncle of his, Isaac Hough, junior, who lived in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, and who may have borne these arms as a matter of tradition.

Certainly, this coat of arms was borne in England at a date sufficiently early for the first armigerous gentleman of the family to have been the common ancestor of Richard Hough and of all the other Houghs who spring from Cheshire.

son to make a contribution for the welfare of the war's living victims, the disabled veterans, the widows and the fatherless children of veterans. This money will be used entirely in the welfare work of the Legion and Auxiliary, the bulk of it in the work of the local Post and Unit.

Preparations for Poppy Day are going forward rapidly with the arrival of the memorial poppies at American Legion Auxiliary headquarters. The little red flowers total 1000.

The poppies are being counted and arranged in readiness for distribution to the Poppy Day workers who will offer them, to be worn as a tribute to the World War dead. All work in connection with the observance is being carried out by volunteers so that every penny received as Poppy Day contributions can go into the welfare funds of the Legion and Auxiliary.

"The poppies are paper replicas of the wild European poppies which bloomed along the battle front and in the war cemeteries during the World War," Mrs. Riley explained.

"Each of the little red flowers has been made by hand by some disabled veteran in need of employment. For each poppy the Auxiliary has paid its maker one cent, enabling hundreds of veterans to support themselves and families through the winter and spring. Approximately ten million of the poppies have been made this year, meaning earnings of $100,000 placed in the empty pockets of these disabled veterans. In addition to the earnings of the veterans making the poppies, the poppy funds bring aid to thousands of needy families of veterans throughout the year."

Honor the Memory of Past Master of Grange

LANGHORNE, May 11—The meeting of the Middletown Grange Wednesday night was a memorial service to their beloved member and past master, William Newbold, who passed from their midst two weeks ago. Mr. Newbold was one of the charter members of Middletown Grange and was very active in its organization and work. The members adopted several resolutions observing his death.

Following the service, the primary business centered around a report given by Jesse G. Webster, a member of the school board of Hulmeville, on the proposed legislation in regard to schools. Mr. Webster was a delegate to the School Directors Association convention in Harrisburg in February, week at the races at Pimlico, Md.

He had several copies of a pamphlet, which contained reports on all the proposed legislation, which he distributed to members. The Grange has always been extremely interested in the educational program of the state, particularly as it affects rural communities.

Two other Grange members who also serve on school boards, namely Harold Austin, of the Silas district, and Edwin Ridge, of the Feasterville district, supplemented Mr. Webster's talk and added many valuable suggestions.

The entertainment was given by Mrs. Jesse Webster who read a poem "I Am A Farmer" and others.

The next meeting will be at the home of Master, Dr. Henry Terry, Wednesday, May 22nd. This meeting will mark a plant exchange, where members will buy, sell and exchange odd and unique plants.

Chauncey Stoneback, Jr., and Harvey Stoneback were attendants this week at the races at Pimlico, Md.

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK TEAM AT VILLANOVA

By Jack Orr

Today the Bristol High School track squad minus its coach and the Senior members will travel to Villanova to participate in the interscholastic meet to be held there. Sam Schiffer, assistant manager will be in complete charge with Eddie McGinley as the next in power.

Coach "Bill" Dougherty states that his main object in sending Roman "Pit" Pico to the national championships at New York on Saturday was to gain experience. Before the meet Jack Cruz of Temple confided in Pico that he also was in the meet for the experience. The Bristol boy captured a first place in the rope climb while Cruz was runner-up.

The intra-mural baseball tournament for girls is well underway and the lads will start their schedule as soon as the Seniors return from Washington with the Coach. The freshman lasses won their first start against the eighth grade club by the count of 10-2.

The girls of the school certainly are putting in enough time in practicing for the various track and field events. Although they have but two track meets this year they are training faithfully every evening in preparation for climax of the season in the Bucks County Interscholastic Meet.

Tom Laughlin of Fallsington High shot put mark of 42 feet 5 inches broke the B. C. L. M. record for this event. If the barrel-chested representative of the Orange and Black does as well in the meet on May 18 he will most certainly bring home the bacon for the Falls aggregation.

Bristol High sent their "cub" team into action against the Orange and Black as half of the club was laid up with injuries. A jinx seems to be following the boys around all this year as they are getting as many bad breaks as Jimmy Wilson's Phillies.

Last Saturday the club did not place in any events in the Princeton Interscholastics. It seemed as if the competition was too tough for the lads of the Cardinal and Gray.

Best Bespectacled Boxman

By BURNLEY

Although it has been less than a year since he made his major league debut, young Johnny Broaca has already established himself as one of the ranking right-handers of the American League, and seems certain to develop into a real pitching great.

This bespectacled, studious chap, who jumped straight from Yale to the Yankees without the usual minor league seasoning, has everything necessary to become one of the mightiest masters of the mound. Equipped by nature with a perfect pitching temperament, John is always cool and calm without being stolid or phlegmatic. Tight situations and crucial moments fail to upset him, for this young college kid has the poise and confidence of a big league veteran.

Broaca has worlds of determination and plenty of courage. He is one of those fellows who plan what they want to do in life and then methodically set out to fulfill the ambition, letting nothing discourage or swerve them from their chosen path.

Unlike many youngsters with a lot of natural talent, Broaca is eager to learn from older pitchers and welcomes criticism and advice. He will practice for hours daily to correct some seemingly unimportant flaw in his delivery, in order to perfect his hurling form.

Johnny has none of the "rah! rah!" spirit generally associated with college athletes, and perhaps for this reason was not subjected to the heavy riding that annoyed Master Devens of Harvard during his abortive attempt to make the grade with the Yankees.

Born of poor Lithuanian parents, Broaca is a very different type from the scion of the wealthy Devens family. Johnny, working as a waiter at Yale to get through college, is one of those self-made men who have pulled themselves up by their own bootstraps.

The bespectacled Yankee moundsman is a very quiet fellow, and doesn't mix much with his fellow players. Johnny spends most of his spare time reading books of biography, history and philosophy, which is certainly a rather unusual hobby for a professional ball player.

At any rate, Broaca should develop into the best of all the pitchers who have won championships. In the past, Lee Meadows, the old Pirate moundsman, was probably the outstanding four-eyed pitcher, and the silent Lithuanian of the Yanks appears destined for greater heights than Lee ever reached.

ATHLETIC DIET

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 11—(INS)—Banana cake made the University of Missouri's last season's basketball team. It can be told now.

The Tiger caepsters weren't worth an ice cube in Antarctica before one benched member of the squad—discouraged by his own poor play and the team's early defeats—decided to assuage his grief by breaking training diet and indulging in his secret passion, banana cake.

He happened to be put into a game that same evening and, to his surprise, won it practically by himself.

Delightedly, he told his mates. They tried the delicacy, with similar gratifying results. As a result of banana cake, players insist, the Tigers won victory after victory, blasting hopes of title contenders who had out-classed them at the start of the year, and finished with an upset double victory over the Kansas Jayhawkers which robbed the latter of the conference championship.

BENSALEM GETS REVENGE OVER FALLSINGTON NINE

Revenge was sweet when the Bensalem nine met the Fallsington nine on Bensalem's grounds and turned the tide by winning 11-4. After a wobbly start by Donhart, Ed Efling's relief pitching and the bats of the Bensalem nine drifted to victory.

Fallsington started the scoring in the first on a triple by Anderson, a fielder's choice and a double by Lovett, getting a total of two runs. They added another in the second when Johnson tripled and Jadocki singled. Bensalem came back in the third when Rigby walked and Spengler hit one for four bases to deep center. They added three more in the third when Torpey doubled, Efling doubled, Torpey was hit by pitched ball, Rigby walked and Fletcher singled. They added another in the fifth on a walk to Wilkins and a double by Efling. They rallied for five more in the sixth when Torpey started off with a single, Rigby was hit by pitched ball, Spengler singled, Fletcher walked and Edelman was safe on a miscue. Paulsworth then doubled and sent the three remaining runs in. Fallsington scored their last run on an error and single by pinch hitter Linecurry.

Spengler and Tomlinson led the Bensalem batters with three hits each.

LANGHORNE TRIALS TO START TOMORROW AT 2

LANGHORNE, May 11—Glorifying American speed in the same style that the late Florenz Ziegfeld glorified the American girl, Ralph A. Hankinson, premier silver-plated auto race promoter, will throw open the gates of Langhorne Speedway, his spacious plant between Philadelphia and Trenton, for a 100-mile orgy of thrills tomorrow afternoon, on the world's fastest mile oiled circular track.

Last minute trials will start at 2 p. m., eastern daylight time, with the first of five ten-mile races starting after the final qualifying car, to be succeeded by four more races and then by the 50-mile Silver Anniversary Sweepstakes.

Featured by a super-star group including Sig Haugdahl, noted Norwegian driver of 22 years' tough riding on the roaring road; Billy Winn, two-time Hankinson circuit champion; Johnny Hannon, current AAA eastern crown-holder; Bob Sall, king in 1933; Doc Mackenzie, the latest and perhaps most popular driver of the day; Al Aspen, Freddie Winnall, Ken Fowler, Johnny Concannon, Johnny Morretti, Harry Angeloni, Walt Killinger, Ben Shaw, Johnnie Duncan, Milt Marion, and other notables of fast motor motion, Langhorne offers a fascinating season's inaugural.

Winnall, Aspen, Hannon, Winn and Mackenzie past winners and the latter trio present record holders, will be fighting along with the rest for purse awards, points in the eastern AAA and Hankinson circuit 1935 championships, as well as the fame of victory and plaudits of the crowd.

With seating capacity approximating 20,000 and infield accommodations for three times as many more, it appears that all eastern attendance records will be broken for the promised splash of color and lightning speed.

Eight cars will "go to town" in the first four races; as high as 18 may whisk past the stand in the semi-final while the crowning 50-mile race will see the cream of the day's crop in the distance grind.

Situated on U. S. Highway No. 1 seven miles south of Trenton and 19 miles northwest of Philadelphia, it seems like the old adage of "all roads lead to Langhorne." Cordons of traffic officers will be on hand for what promises to be massive motorcades to the historic course.

Leading entries to date include: Sig Haugdahl, Billy Winn, Johnnie Hannon, Bob Sall, Doc Mackenzie, Ken Fowler, Clay Weatherly, Milt Marion, Freddy Winnall, Al Aspen, Walt Killinger, Ben Shaw, Park Culp, Harry Angeloni, Johnny Duncan, Johnny Concannon, Ted Nyquist, Johnny Morretti, Cy Yocum, Bill Scarince, Bill Morrissey, Bill Shoop, Floyd Gottschall, Tommy Hinner, Floyd Linn, Len Perry, Jack Moon, Walt Keiper, Sam Castranova, Ed Coffey, Gus Zarka, Eddie Stapeck, Frank Reynolds, Al Trepanier, Jiggs Riffert, Jay Schwarz, Al Cusick, Vince Scully, Wes Johnson, Otto Burdick, Pete Craig, Bill Sockwell, Johnnie Cebula, George Sholtin, Don Church, Ed Eels, Artie Maytor, Buster Williams, Jimmie Zolner.

FITCHBURG, Mass. — (INS)—Miss Adelberta Haskins, teacher, has petitioned the city council for $12.60 which represents pay for a day and a half which she lost when marooned in her home by deep snow.

so cheaply? Mainly because the major portion of their business is written in country districts where the losses are the least. And being a mutual company, the policy-holder benefits thereby. No stocks are floated upon which dividends need to be declared. This partly accounts for low premiums. And remember, you are given all the protection possible to get even though you paid twice the price.
